Candidate Profiles: Anacortes City Council, Position 1

Walters, Schryvers have different ideas about building heights, regulations

BY RICHARD WALKER
rwalker@goanacortes.com

John Schryvers said he's running against incumbent Ryan Walters for Anacortes City Council for no other reason than "he's in my ward."

But the two candidates have entirely different views on the direction the city should go in order to accommodate growth.

Walters, who is seeking a third term from

Ward 1, said work that he and the council did in updating the city's development regulations and zoning map built "certainty" in the development process by reducing the need for conditional-use permits.

When he first ran for council in 2011, many land-use proposals didn't mesh with policies on the books and developers often had to apply for conditional-use permits. For example, until this year, the San Juan Passage neighborhood was in a Commercial Marine zone, not a residential zone.

"We didn't have certainty in our land-use plans and policies," Walters said. "You had the ability to pursue a conditional-use (permit)

Five-story apartments planned at 18th and O

rwalker@goanacortes.com

A proposed apartment building, tentatively named Fidalgo Flats, is the first project proposed under the updated development regulations that were approved by the Anacortes City Council this summer.

If built as proposed by Madrona Real Estate Services, it would rival the downtown Majestic Inn as the tallest building in Anacortes.

But not everyone is convinced this is the best way to address the city's lack of affordable apartments.

That was the goal when the Anacortes City Council adopted the development regulations allowing a fifth story on new apartment or condominium buildings in exchange for a percentage of smaller, more affordable units.

Tom Lane expected to see such development take place in the more urbanized downtown core. He didn't expect a five-story, 25-unit apartment building to be built across the street from his 100-year-old, one-and-a-half story home at 18th Street and O Avenue.

"It's a great-looking building, but it doesn't belong next to a residential neighborhood. It belongs in the downtown core," Lane said Monday of the proposed apartments.

"If this is built here, we're going down a new path. Where's it going to stop?"

The updated development regulations include an incentive designed to increase the number of affordable rentals in the city by allowing an additional story in exchange for 25% of the apartments or condos being 600 square feet — the idea being that smaller will be more affordable.

But "more affordable" does not necessarily mean "affordable housing," according to one former City Council member. Cynthia Richardson pointed out

Sirens, maps prepare residents for tsunami risk

State disaster experts say it will happen like this: the Juan de Fuca plate will jar loose and slide under the North American plate, shoving a swath of ocean 18 feet high toward the Washington coast at speeds of at least 20 knots.

The wave will wash over coastal Washington and Vancouver Island and continue on through the Strait of Juan de Fuca, sweeping over communities along the upper Olympic Peninsula and lower Vancouver Island: Neah Bay, 29 minutes after the tsunami's start; Clallam Bay, 42 minutes; Sooke, 54 minutes; Port Angeles, 1 hour 8 minutes; Victoria, 1 hour 14 minutes; San Juan Island's South Beach, 1 hour 32 minutes; southwest Lopez Island, 1 hour 33 minutes; southwest Fidalgo Island, 1 hour 40

'Win with Warren Anacortes' to meet

Local supporters of presidential candidate Elizabeth Warren will have their first organizational meeting 4:30-6 p.m. Oct. 13 in the Anacortes library meeting room.

The "Win with Warren Anacortes" meeting is open to the public. Attendees will learn how they can get involved in her campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. Warren, a U.S. senator from Massachusetts, is one of 19 candidates still in the race for the Democratic nomination.

Warren, 70, is a former university law professor, served as chairwoman of the Congressional Oversight Panel of the Troubled Asset Relief Program during the Great Recession, and was instrumental in the creation of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau.

For information, contact Theresa Baker, 206-850-1001, talaclba@hotmail.com; or Megan Glancey, 915-449-4092 or smglancey@yahoo.com.

Cleland-McGrath leads in fundraising

Christine Cleland-McGrath, candidate for Anacortes City Council Position 2, leads all Anacortes City Council candidates in fundraising, according to documents filed with the state Public Disclosure Commission.

As for Monday morning, Cleland-McGrath, a real estate agent and city planning commissioner, reported 38 contributions totaling $10,075 and campaign expenses of $9,626.53. Cleland-McGrath reported contributing $1,100 to her campaign fund and reported in-kind contributions of $1,442. Her top three contributors, among them the Skagit/Island County Builders Association, each donated $1,000 to her campaign.

Appointed Councilwoman Carolyn Moulton, seeking election to at-large Position 6, reported 45 contributions totaling $5,781 and expenses of $2,738.01.

These candidates are filing mini-reports, which means they do not intend to raise or spend more than $5,000 on their campaigns: Ryan Walters, Position 1; Dom Tor Fleming, Position 2; Jeremy Carter, lone candidate for Position 3. Position 1 candidate John Schryvers and Position 6 candidate John Espinoza had not filed reports as of Monday with the Public Disclosure Commission.

Students plan climate change event

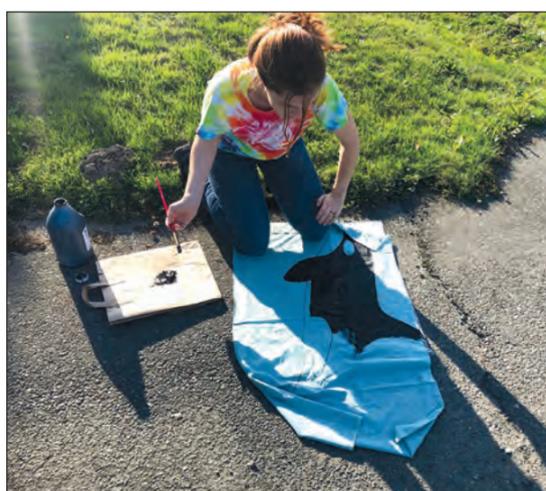

BY MONIQUE MERRILL
mmerrill@skagitpublishing.com

Some Anacortes High School students are planning to join a worldwide strike to bring attention to climate change by leaving campus at 11:30 a.m. Friday.

The strike at the school is organized by the students and scheduled during the lunch hour as to not disrupt classes.

The Anacortes Extinction Rebellion group will join the demonstration with signs and flags made last week at an art-making gathering at one member's home.

"We would rather rebel than go extinct," said Julia Frisbie, while painting an orca on a blue flag. Frisbie said she and her friends formed the Anacortes group over the summer after seeing a need in the community for nonviolent direct action about climate change.

While Extinction Rebellion is an international movement with groups around the world, Frisbie said the Anacortes chapter is not formally organized.

"We're a lot of moms and kids and artsy types," Frisbie said, and at the core of the group's beliefs is intersectionality. "We have a priority to support young people and people of color."

The Anacortes School District is aware of the strike and said it "supports students' right to freedom of expression, while also recognizing that classroom time is precious and should be used for instructional purposes" in a statement released Thursday, Sept. 19.

Project Impact means better understanding for young students

BY BRIANA ALZOLA
balzola@goanacortes.com

A newly expanded summer school option for young students improved math and language arts scores across the board this summer for Anacortes School District participants.

Project Impact welcomed 92 students between kindergarten and third grade this summer, said Chad Sage, an Island View Elementary School teacher who led the program this year.

Funded by the Anacortes Schools Foundation and a few private donors, the program expanded on work already being done with young children in previous summers and followed closely the plans set out by district Early Learning Coordinator Nicole Mortimer, Sage told the Anacortes School Board at its meeting last week.

“Every one of my students made growth,” Sage said. “The lowest-level students made the most growth.”

Each student took a test the first week of class and then again at the end of the four-week program. Math scores increased by an average of 14 percent and English language arts scores increased by an average of 21 percent, Sage said.

“Project Impact was a huge success,” he said. “And it was a great experience for me personally.”

While the primary focus for the classes were math and English language arts, the students participated in a wide variety of enrichment activities, Sage said.

The students were bused for free to the school for the program, which provided an integral part to the program’s success and offered an element of equity, Sage said.

Teachers read to the young students, gave them free lunches and took them on weekly field trips to places like Storvik Park, the Rosario Beach tide pools and Washington Park.

“We wanted them to see what our community has to offer,” he said. “I learned just as much if not more as my students.”

The students met with adult mentors at each of those places and learned through hands-on activity and play, Sage said.

The young people also took part in enrichment activities each day in the classroom, in subjects like art, yoga, dance, Soo Bakh Do and LEGO robotics (which proved to be very popular, Sage said).

“For a lot of kids, this was a highlight of their day,” he said.

Students sometimes struggle to learn in a traditional classroom, Sage said. By offering elements of learning in different settings, the students had a better chance at success.

In addition to getting involved in school, the students showed a large amount of social growth, Sage said. They learned how to better share and take turns, say please and thank you, work together in groups and problem solve in the classroom.

The young students also learned about identifying and regulating emotions, using the RULER method that started with Anacortes School District staff last year and is being rolled out to students this year.

Positive feedback came back from both students and parents, Sage said. Staff, too, responded overwhelmingly positively to the program and 93% said they had a positive experience with the program.

Sage said he had a positive experience and is looking forward to next summer.

He already has some plans for improvement.

This year, staff over-enrolled the program, but because all students don’t show up, some spots went unfilled. Next year, the plan is to over-enroll by 30% so the classes are full and the most kids get the help as possible.

Class sizes will also go up from 10 to 12 kids so that more children can participate.

“I don’t think those two students are going to make an impact on our teachers, but it’s going to make a big impact on our students,” Sage said.

He plans to add collaboration time between the teachers and the par-aeducators and continue both enrichment activities and field trip excursions.

Fun run raises money for schools, students

BY BRIANA ALZOLA
balzola@goanacortes.com

Whitney Early Childhood Education Center students earned $5,000 for their school this month by getting together and running as fast as they could.

The youngest Anacortes School District students joined other Anacortes School District students, staff and community members for the annual Fueling Education 5K Fun Run and Walk event Sept. 15.

Poor weather loomed (after having to cancel the event last year because of a storm), but everything turned out beautifully on the morning of the race, said Marta McClintock, with the Anacortes Schools Foundation.

“It went really well,” she said.

The Schools Foundation hosts the event with help from main sponsor Shell Puget Sound Refinery.

About 250 people participated this year, with about 100 registering the day of the event.

“We ran out of race forms,” she said. “It was a great event with great participation.”

The refinery grants $5,000 to the school that has the highest percentage turnout on the day of the race. So, even though Whitney students didn’t show up in the biggest number, that school had the highest percentage of turnout for their school, McClintock said.

They will get to vote on how to use that money at their school.

The foundation handed out several other prizes to participants, McClintock said.

The fun run is one of the foundation’s biggest fundraisers of the year. It brought in $45,000 total, including the $5,000 for Whitney.

That money will go toward Project Impact (a new summer learning project), toward STEM programming for kids and toward scholarships.

Board considers changing up homecoming in future

BY BRIANA ALZOLA
balzola@goanacortes.com

Homecoming has traditionally been about football, but as Anacortes High School gears up for its annual homecoming week Oct. 7-11, the School District is considering future updates that allow for a more gender-balanced celebration.

The week has traditionally ended with a football game Friday night, followed by a dance Saturday. This year, AHS doesn’t have a varsity football team, so the culmination of homecoming week on Oct. 11 will instead feature the junior varsity team playing at 7 p.m. at home against Bellingham’s varsity team.

Some School Board members, such as Erin Rieger, wonder if always ending with an all-male sport is fair to the female athletes.

Superintendent Mark Wenzel said at the September board meeting that there had been interest in making sure the focus on girls and boys was more even during homecoming week. After this year’s celebration, the School Board and staff plan to put out a survey about potential changes in coming years.

Eric Titus, the school’s athletic director, tried to find a way to end homecoming week with a girls’ sport this year, but couldn’t make it work, Principal Jon Ronngren said at an earlier School Board meeting.

However, both girls and boys will have games during this homecoming week. The girls soccer team will play at home at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 8, as will the girls volleyball team. The boys tennis team will have two home meets (4 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, and 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 8), and the cross country team will host a home meet at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 9. The girls swim team will host a home meet at 2:55 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 10.

That’s in addition to regularly scheduled activities for the week, including field night (6-8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 9, at Rice Field) and the homecoming parade (3:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 11, downtown).

Letters to the Editor

Accept military's mission, noise and all

While I sympathize with the residents of neighborhoods affected by jet noise from NAS Whidbey Island and the outlying practice field in Coupeville, I do not feel that yet another lawsuit against the Navy is an appropriate response.

All of us living in the area or moving to the area need to understand two things.

First, the mission of every military base in the country is singular: the protection and defense of our nation. Inherent in that mission at NAS Whidbey is the necessity for pilots to practice their landings in the same manner required for landing on an aircraft carrier. This is very noisy but essential for the safe accomplishment of the mission.

Second, military bases are rarely static. They often expand or change, which, in the case of jet bases, may increase noise.

Conversely, sometimes bases are eliminated altogether, which may lead to severe downturns in local economies and real estate markets.

Rather than using valuable dollars from our military budget to battle continuous lawsuits, we need to exercise our due diligence as prospective residents. Then, if we choose to live here, we need to understand and accept not only the conditions that exist at the time, but also the unpredictability that comes with living in areas affected by the operations of a military base.

Anacortes traffic congestion is bad, and it's bound to get worse.

That was the consensus of the Anacortes City Council Monday when council members agreed to a city application for a $40,000 federal grant to conduct a traffic study here.

The study will specifically look at the effects an R Avenue underpass off of Highway 20 would have on city traffic patterns.

Further development in the city's urban renewal area, coupled with continued ferry traffic and Snelson-Anvil operations, prompted city staff to concern about traffic congestion.

The federal government has earmarked the grant funds for cities with traffic problems caused by oil-related industries, such as Snelson Anvil, according to city engineer Dave Ford.

Flats

in a letter to the Anacortes American that the city zoning code defines affordable rentals as those within reach to households earning no more than 50% of the city's median income, and affordable home ownership as being affordable to households earning no more than 80% of the median income, with no more than 30% of monthly household income paid for monthly housing expenses.

The median household income in Anacortes is $63,950 a year, or $5,329.16 a month, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. "Affordable" rent for a median-income household in Anacortes would be $1,774.61.

Bradford Augustine, founder and managing partner of Madrona Real Estate Services, didn't say how much rent would be for a 600-square-foot apartment at Fidalgo Flats, but did say rents are driven by the cost of construction per square foot; therefore, a smaller apartment should command a lower rent.

"We took advantage of the smaller-unit incentive, which in turn means those units will rent for less money — hopefully — than if they were bigger," Augustine said. If the council adopts a Multifamily Tax Exemption Program now under consideration, those five 600-square-foot units will rent at a below-market rate, he said.

The Multifamily Tax Exemption Program would free developers of property tax payments for about eight years in exchange for a percentage of below-market rentals during that time. Augustine said he plans to apply for the exemption if it's adopted.

"I call it a quid pro quo — the developer gets a benefit, the city gets a benefit, and those that are looking for what I call workforce housing get a benefit — a bartender in town, or someone who works at the hospital. So, we are able to offer a product at 80% of fair market — so, a 20% discount — and the only reason we can do that is that we're getting a discount on our property taxes."

He added, "The whole key to a vibrant city is to have people living in the city, and when you can't afford to live here (and) you've got to live in the outskirts, that's not healthy for the shops and businesses in town."

'A very beautiful building'

Madrona Real Estate Services builds and manages commercial and residential real estate, mostly in Seattle, although the company also developed and owns Fidalgo Square on Commercial Avenue between 17th and 18th streets. Among the other properties it's developed: Bellevue Farm Residences in Roche Harbor, condominiums in Madison Park, townhomes in Washington Park, mixed-use residential and commercial in Capitol Hill, and retail centers in Auburn and Kent.

Fidalgo Flats will be developed on land that was recently cleared of two older homes. Augustine's company also owns a 1920-era home and vacant lot across the street. The home will be fixed up, he said, and will be a rental; the lot next door is proposed for additional parking for Fidalgo Square and Fidalgo Flats.

Fidalgo Flats most resembles Madrona's REO Flats apartment building in Capitol Hill — minus the ground-floor commercial — and will have several of the same amenities: CERA-CLAD textured fiber cement siding, earth tones, metal awnings, and a landscaped rooftop patio with pavers, chairs, and gas fire pit and barbecue.

"It's going to be a very beautiful building," he said. "We're not building something that resembles 'old' (and) we're not trying to do something that is too trendy. We're trying to do something attractive, using high-quality materials."

Several new developments and upgrades are underway in the South Commercial Avenue area. Quantum Construction, the proposed contractor for Fidalgo Flats, is finishing construction of the Anacortes Family Center's newest apartments on 28th Street. Barrett Financial remodeled and moved into the former Samish Nation Health and Human Services building on Commercial Avenue. SaviBank remodeled and moved into the former John L. Scott Real Estate building. The former Select Styling building was rebuilt and reborn as a Jimmy John's sandwich shop, and the city will soon build an adjacent park named in honor of former City Council member Erica Pickett.

Still, Lane feels Fidalgo Flats would be overwhelming for the neighborhood.

Ronald Fernandez, a resident of 15th street who said he has a doctorate in urban anthropology, agreed.

"In my opinion, and from having lived in other cities, I think the 65 feet is a bit excessive," he told the City Council on Monday. "Sixty-five feet is probably overdoing it for this town."

Police Blotter

The Anacortes Police Department responded to more than 150 calls Sept. 14-19. Here are some of them.

Saturday, Sept. 14

- A verbal argument between two male roommates over their shared pet turned physical early Saturday. The two men admitted they were involved in a physical altercation. The primary aggressor, an intoxicated 43-year-old who allegedly head butted his roommate multiple times, was taken into custody and booked in jail on a domestic violence assault charge.

- A local man reported that a Census volunteer came to his house recently, though he thought the Census wasn't taking place until next May. The officer told the man that Census data is collected throughout the year and to call police if he detected anything suspicious about the volunteer's visit.

Sunday, Sept. 15

- A 29th Street resident reported that a hawk or falcon on her property was unable to fly on its own. The call was transferred to a Fish and Wildlife officer.

Monday, Sept. 16

- Officers contacted a 50-year-old Port Angeles woman in her car parked on Q Avenue. The woman was intoxicated and a routine check showed that she had a theft warrant. She was arrested but then released after the jail declined to accept her on the warrant.

- A 55-year-old Anacortes man was arrested and booked in jail on suspicion of domestic violence assault. The man and his girlfriend were reportedly arguing and the man approached her while she was sitting on a couch and allegedly pushed her back onto a couch cushion.

Tuesday, Sept. 17

- A local pet owner was bathing her small dog when its paw got stuck in the sink drain. The owner called the animal control officer for help, but she didn't have all of the tools needed to free the animal, so she called the Anacortes Fire Department to assist. The dog's paw was freed from the drain, and the dog was not injured.

- A local man found a wallet on the street and turned it over to a police officer. The wallet was returned to its owner.

Thursday, Sept. 19

- An officer pulled a sedan over on 23rd Street on Thursday afternoon because it was swerving and came to a stop in the middle of the roadway. The officer told the 90-year-old driver that she was concerned about her driving habits. The driver said she was looking for a nearby health-care facility. A routine driver's check revealed her license was suspended, so the woman was arrested, cited and released for driving while license suspended.

- The 79-year-old driver of an SUV was determined to be the at-fault driver in a two-car collision at 18th Street and O Avenue. The driver told the investigating officer that he did not see the oncoming car driving northbound on O. Both vehicles sustained reportable damage, but no one was injured.

- A 47-year-old Anacortes woman was arrested Thursday afternoon on a theft warrant. A sergeant on patrol recognized the woman as she walked along O Avenue and took her into custody. She was booked in the county jail on a 45-day commit.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES

Animated tsunami simulations, created by scientists at the state Department of Natural Resources, were released in August showing wave height and speed during a tsunami on the Washington coast and the San Juan Islands. New animations will focus on the Port of Bellingham, Anacortes and southwest Washington.

Alaska triggered a tsunami that reached a height of almost 13 feet at Seaview, Washington. The Alaskan earthquake had a magnitude of 9.2, the second strongest earthquake ever recorded.

Geologists say the plates' movement has produced a 9.0 earthquake about once every 300 to 600 years. That means the next one "could happen tomorrow, or it could happen 200 years from now," said Steven Friederich, spokesman for the Washington Military Department's Emergency Management Division.

Brian Terbush, the division's earthquake program coordinator, said GPS tracking indicates the plates are moving "at a slower rate than (they) would if they were not 'stuck together' by the friction between the plates close to where they meet," he texted Monday. He added that the plates slip "a little bit every 14 months" and bend upward. "This is the signal seen on the GPS stations that indicates the (plates) are locked," he texted.

"Most of those slip events happen deep underground under the sound west of Anacortes ... under the San Juan Islands."

State emergency management officials have implemented several improvements to the state's tsunami warning systems to help residents prepare. The latest: All of the state's tsunami sirens — including two in Anacortes — will be upgraded soon with better satellite capability and connectivity under a federal grant awarded this month to the state Emergency Management Division.

The $870,752 Tsunami Activities Grant was awarded the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration/National Weather Service.

The tsunami sirens in Anacortes — one near Skyline Marina, the other at the city wastewater treatment plant — are among 76 All Hazard Alert Broadcast warning sirens on the Washington coast. The new satellite upgrades will help the state know when batteries need to be replaced and improve remote maintenance of the sirens. The funding also purchases one year of satellite time for daily status testing, monthly audio tests, emergency activations, and tsunami evacuation exercises and drills.

"Having these sirens connected to satellites means we'll have a safer coast and more control over any maintenance issues that might come up," state tsunami program coordinator Elyssa Tappero said in an announcement of the grant.

The grant will also fund an analysis to determine how many vertical evacuation structures are needed on the coast. In the face of a tsunami originating from the Cascadia Subduction Zone, some parts of the coast may have fewer than 20 minutes to evacuate, according to the Emergency Management Division. One such structure exists above a gym at Ocosta Elementary School in Westport. Another tower will be constructed next year in Tokeland by the Shoalwater Bay Indian Tribe. A potential new tower on the Long Beach Peninsula is being designed and work is underway on potential towers in Aberdeen, Westport and Ocean Shores.

The grant also pays for:

- New animated tsunami simulations created by scientists at the state Department of Natural Resources. Animations were released in August showing the entire Washington coast as well as detailed views in Bellingham and the San Juan Islands. The new animations will focus on the Port of Bellingham, Anacortes and southwest Washington.

Online resources

The state Department of Natural Resources produced an online video showing how tsunami waves would inundate this area.

View it at <https://youtu.be/fLlvp3bC-DEU>.

- New inundation and current velocity maps created for the Hood Canal and northern Whatcom County, areas where maps are not currently published.

- A Maritime Mitigation and Response Strategy for the Port of Bellingham, and education and outreach focused on maritime and inner coast stakeholders.

- New tsunami signs, training for NOAA Weather Radio use and more outreach preparedness events on the coast.

In addition, emergency managers released in April new "tsunami evacuation walk times" maps residents can use to get to safety when a tsunami is on its way.

The maps also identify three assembly sites in Anacortes where residents can meet with loved ones and get access to drinking water, blankets and medication: Anacortes Airport, Anacortes High School, and Swinomish Casino Lodge & Resort.

COMING UP: The Great Washington Shake-Out is scheduled for Oct. 17. The event will include a video contest for teens; prizes will be awarded for short videos about earthquake preparedness. More information is available at mil.wa.gov/earthquake.

Obituaries

BERYLE MILLER ANDERSON

Long time Anacortes resident, Beryle Anderson, passed away peacefully at her home on Friday, September 13th.

Beryle was an accomplished local watercolor artist and gardener.

Her loving family includes her 4 children: Gregg (Dana) Palmer of Grand Junction, CO; Lauri (Brad) Durocher of Anacortes, WA; Keri (Mark) Burgwald of Hiram, GA, and Scott (Christine) Palmer of Klamath Falls, OR; 2 step-children: Doug Anderson of Lakewood, CA; Paulette Runningwolf of St Mary, MT; 11 grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Bob Anderson and her siblings, Ed, Ardis, Jim, Marilyn (Fuller), Wally and Jeri and will be long remembered for her great laugh and zest for life.

DEATH NOTICE GORDON "BUD" THOMAS

Gordon Lee "Bud" Thomas, 83, of Mount Vernon, WA passed away at Skagit Valley Hospital.

Arrangements are in the care of Evans Funeral Chapel and Crematory, Inc., Anacortes, WA and the San Juan Islands.

JOHN SHELBY "STUBBY" SLATER

May 24, 1941 - September 14, 2019

John Shelby "Stubby" Slater, 78, of Anacortes passed away Saturday, September 14, 2019 at the Whatcom Hospice House after battling numerous illnesses.

He was born on May 24, 1941 in San Antonio, Texas, the son of Travis G. & Edna (Eaves) Slater. Raised Southern... "yes sir, no ma'am," hats off in the house and shirts on while at the table were a few of the house rules of respect. He was always prepared to lend a helping hand to his friends and family.

His school years in New Jersey were made more adventurous working as a golf caddy and dancing on American Bandstand. He moved to Anacortes in 1958 with his family when his father was transferred for the opening of the Texaco Oil Refinery. Shortly after, he enlisted in the Army.

As a veteran of the Vietnam War, his experience overseeing the motor pool led to an initial civilian career as a mechanic. After working at Frontier Ford, he then took a job at the Texaco Oil Refinery becoming a Crude Unit Operator where he made many lifelong friends. He retired in 1999.

In addition to his appreciation for all veterans, he had a love of Ford trucks. He was happiest with his Ford truck packed with camping and fishing gear, classic country on the radio headed to the Twisp River with his family. Other traveling adventures included antiquing and playing cards.

A special thank you to the staff at Island Hospital for the many days of care after numerous stays. We also thank the Whatcom Hospice House that provided a place of comfort for his final days.

He was preceded in death by his parents Travis G. & Edna (Eaves) Slater and siblings Mildred Gomez, Tracy Slater, Gilbert Slater.

John leaves behind his wife and loving partner in life's journey of 57 years, Cathy Slater (Turner); three children (spouses): John Slater, Jeff Shelby (Emily) Slater and, Carol Anne (Dane Lee); his four grandchildren: Corbin and Gavin Lee, Ashley and Travis Slater; honorary daughter, Julie Slater and loyal friend Doug Miller.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorial contributions be sent to the Anacortes American Legion or the Combat Veterans International at PO Box 28716 Bellingham, WA 98228.

A Graveside Service with Military Funeral Honors will be held at 11 a.m., Saturday, September 28, 2019 at Grandview Cemetery with a reception following at Skyline Beach Club.

To share memories of John, please sign the online guestbook at www.evanschapel.com.

LLOYD STANLEY ARNESON

October 13, 1943 - September 16, 2019

Lloyd Stanley Arneson, 75, of Bremerton and formerly of Anacortes, passed away on Monday, September 16, 2019. He was born on October 13, 1943 in Anacortes, WA; the son of Stanley and Marie Arneson.

Lloyd is preceded in death by his parents. He is survived by his wife, Barbara; children (spouses): Mark (Katie) and Gary (Shawna); his brother: Chuck (Jeanie) and grandchildren: Tyler and Isabelle.

State making updates to oil spill response plan

By Skagit Publishing staff

State oil spill rules that apply to pipelines, facilities and vessels are being updated.

The state Department of Ecology began reviewing the state's oil spill contingency plan in January and is accepting public comment on a draft update through Oct. 6.

The update was prompted by the state Legislature, which in 2018 directed Ecology to update the plan by December 2019, including adding the latest knowledge of oils that may sink when spilled in water.

The plan requires large commercial vessels, oil handling facilities and pipelines to have detailed plans and contracts in place for oil spill response equipment and trained personnel to respond.

In addition to adding language specific to oils that may sink and updating procedures for addressing affected wildlife, the goals of the update include making rules that are consistent for pipeline, facility and vessel operators, and to strengthen Ecology's oversight.

For example, Ecology spill response technology specialist Sonja Larson said currently only pipeline operators are required to include plans for air quality monitoring in the event of a spill. The update will extend that requirement to vessels and facilities.

One of the changes that will strengthen oversight is adding a requirement for Ecology approval of spill management teams at each facility, vessel operator and pipeline.

"Through this rule

we will understand the depth and capacity of these teams to respond to spills," Larson said. Facilities include the Shell Puget Sound and Marathon Anacortes refineries at March Point. The update will mean changes for those refineries, for oil tankers that move through Skagit

County waters, and for the Puget Sound Pipeline that delivers crude oil from Alberta to the refineries and the Olympic Pipeline that moves natural gas through the county.

Components of the plan specific to vessels were updated in 2012 and those specific to pipelines were updated in 2016.

Also in 2016, rules were established for railroads, due to increasing volumes of crude oil being delivered to the state's refineries.

An update to the railroad-specific rules are also underway. Public comments were gathered in June and July.

For the current oil spill contingency plan update, comments can be submitted online or by mail to Sonja Larson, Rulemaking Lead, Department of Ecology, Spills Program, PO Box 47600, Olympia, 98504-7600.

Candidates at a Glance: Anacortes City Council, Position 1

Ryan Walters

Ryan Walters
Age: 39
Residence: Anacortes
Occupation: Director of Planning and Community Development, Samish Indian Nation
Education: Anacortes High School 1998; BA, University of Rochester, 2002; JD, University of California, Davis, 2005
Elected offices held: Anacortes City Council, 2012-present
Community involvement: Skagit Land Trust, Evergreen Islands, Anacortes Conservation Voters
Campaign website: www.ryanwalters.com

Question: What are the most important issues facing the city today?
Walters: Capital facilities planning — planning necessary to ensure sustainability of our infrastructure and our finances — will be key to cities across the country as our pipes, pumps, and roadways age. Ensuring Anacortes maintains a vibrant commercial sector — for the jobs it provides and the community it builds — is critical to a livable city. And most importantly, continuing to build and maintain a culture of open, honest, and responsible government is what makes me most proud to live in Anacortes.

Question: By the time your term is ended, what would you want to say you accomplished?
Walters: Quality infrastructure can make or break a great city. While Anacortes has had a lot of recent successes with improving that infrastructure, we can't keep drawing financial resources from the same well. At the end of the next four years, I'd like to be able to say the City finally has a solid and lasting culture of planning for long-term capital expenses like buildings, infrastructure, and transportation. I'd also like to see the City finally find a permanent solution to its antiquated and seismically vulnerable city hall building, and build and enhance our network of environmentally responsible urban trails.

John W. Schryvers
Age: 41
Residence: Anacortes
Occupation: Chef and restaurant manager
Education: Attended Oak Harbor High School, ITT Technical Institute (Electronic Engineering) and Skagit Valley Community College (Culinary Arts and Hospitality Management)
Question: What are the most important issues facing the city today?
Schryvers: Housing costs and their continued rise is out of control. We have a substance abuse problem plaguing every aspect of our community and we have roads and sidewalks that are so damaged some are unsafe to walk on.

Question: By the time your term is ended, what would you want to say you accomplished?
Schryvers: I would hope to have made it easier and more affordable to build or buy a home or property here in Anacortes. I want to fix our side streets and sidewalks without raising any taxes.

for a huge residential development, and it may or may not have been a good idea, but it wasn't something the council chose because once someone applies for a conditional-use permit, there are all these constraints about talking to people because it's a quasi-judicial action." The updated development regulations and zoning map, approved by the council in July after three years of work, greatly reduced the need for conditional-use permits and built certainty in the process for developers and neighborhoods, Walters said, "If you want to pursue a housing development, you have certainty that if it's in an allowed zone, you can get it.

You're going to have to follow all the rules, but you're going to be able to get (a permit.)" Ditto for commercial development, he said. "Certainly is what both developers and neighborhoods want, and we've been able to achieve some of that." The updated development regulations that Walters supported provide incentives for developers to build more-affordable rentals and homes — smaller apartments, cottages, accessory dwelling units — but Schryvers believes development is too regulated. He supports lifting building height limits, particularly downtown. "Let developers build up — even 10, 12 stories — downtown," he said. "Focus it downtown (and) keep the people downtown, keep the foot traffic downtown where people live, where people shop. It's kind of like a New Urbanism model ... We can stick our heads in the sand and say 'not in my backyard,' but that's not going to solve anything. People are coming, our town is growing. You can't fight growth, but you can plan and prepare to manage it responsibly."

'More relatable'
 Walters was first elected to the City Council in 2011, is planning director for the Samish Indian Nation and formerly served as assistant planning director for Skagit County. He also has a law degree from University of California, Davis. He's a fifth-generation Anacortes resident. (His classmates at Anacortes High School were state Sen. Liz Lovelett and City Attorney Darcy Swetnam.) Schryvers graduated from Oak Harbor High School in 1996, studied electrical engineering at ITT Technical Institute, graduated from culinary school in 2000 from Skagit Valley College and has worked since then as a local chef and bartender. He was inspired to get into public service by the experiences of his namesake grandfather, who served as a fire commissioner and water commissioner in Prosser. "He just never stopped helping people," Schryvers said. Schryvers said he shares a ward with Walters but can connect in a different way to the community. In his own words, he knows what it's like to live paycheck to paycheck, to hear someone from outside the area refer to Anacortes as "Can'taffordus." "This is an awesome community," he said. "I want my kids to be able to live here. More importantly, I want my kids to be able to afford to live here." Noting the affordable issues he and his co-workers face, he said, "If we can't afford to live here, we can't feed you. If (employees at a tire business) can't afford to live here, they ain't changing your tires. The community can fall on itself." Other issues of concern to him: Fixing neighborhood sidewalks (much work has been done, but it's incomplete, he said). He would also like less focus on taxation as a solution. Pointing to one council member's suggestion of a tax on vacation rentals, he said taxation "has been the knee-jerk reaction of our council since I've been paying attention." And he said substance abuse needs to be addressed. He likes the work of the Swinomish Tribe-owned didgwalic

Wellness Center and asked, "Why aren't these facilities in every town in America?" Other issues of concern to Walters: Making the city's licensing and building inspection process more efficient. It might mean adding staff or restructuring. He also proposes making certain offenses in the Anacortes Community Forest Lands — such as camp fires, smoking and alcohol use — ticketable offenses, rather than misdemeanors that must be prosecuted in court.
About the council
 The City Council is the legislative branch of city government and is comprised of seven members, each elected to a four-year term. The council approves contracts, ordinances and resolutions, decides land-use issues and approves the city budget.

The sale may be terminated any time after the 9/23/2019 (11 days before the sale date) and before the sale, by the Borrower or Grantor or the holder of any recorded junior lien or encumbrance by paying the principal and interest, plus costs, fees and advances, if any, made pursuant to the terms of the obligation and/or Deed of Trust, and curing all other defaults. VI. A written Notice of Default was transmitted by the Beneficiary or Trustee to the Borrower(s) and Grantor(s) by both first class and certified mail, proof of which is in the possession of the Trustee; and the Borrower and Grantor were personally served, if applicable, with said written Notice of Default or the written Notice of Default was posted in a conspicuous place on the real property described in Paragraph I above, and the Trustee has possession of proof of such service or posting. The list of recipients of the Notice of Default is listed within the Notice of Foreclosure provided to the Borrower(s) and Grantor(s). These requirements were completed as of 4/26/2019. VII. The Trustee whose name and address are set forth below will provide in writing to anyone requesting it, a statement of all costs and fees due at any time prior to the sale. VIII. The effect of the sale will be to deprive the Grantor and all those who hold by, through or under the Grantor of all their interest in the above-described property. IX. Anyone having any objections to this sale on any grounds whatsoever will be afforded an opportunity to be heard as to those objections if they bring a lawsuit to restrain the sale pursuant to RCW 61.24.130. Failure to bring such a lawsuit may result in a waiver of any proper grounds for invalidating the Trustee's sale. X. NOTICE TO OCCUPANTS OR TENANTS The purchaser at the Trustee's Sale is entitled to possession of the property on the 20th day following the sale, as against the Grantor under the deed of trust (the owner) and anyone having an interest junior to the deed of trust, including occupants who are not tenants. After the 20th day following the sale the purchaser has the right to evict occupants who are not tenants by summary proceedings under Chapter 59.12 RCW. For tenant-occupied property, the purchaser shall provide a tenant with written notice in accordance with RCW 61.24.060. THIS NOTICE IS THE FINAL STEP BEFORE THE FORECLOSURE SALE OF YOUR HOME. You have only 20 DAYS from the recording date of this notice to pursue mediation. DO NOT DELAY. Superior court of Washington, County of Skagit

In re the marriage/domestic partnership of: Petitioner Vanessa Jackson and Respondent Michael Jackson Jr. No. 19-3-00216-29 Summons: Notice about a Marriage or Domestic Partnership (SM) To the Respondent: 1. The petitioner has started an action asking the court: to end your marriage. 2. You must respond to this summons and petition by serving a copy of your written response on the person signing this summons and by filing the original with the clerk of the court. If you do not serve your written response within 20 days (or 60 days if you are served outside the state of WA) after the date this summons was served on you, exclusive of the day of service, the court may enter an order of default against you, and the court may, without further notice to you, enter a decree and approve or provide for the relief requested in the petition. In case of a dissolution of marriage or domestic partnership, the court will not enter the final decree until at least 90 days after filing and service. If you serve a notice of appearance on the undersigned person, you are entitled to notice before an order of default or a decree may be entered. 3. Your written response to the summons and petition must be on one of these forms: Response to Petition about Marriage (FL Divorce 211) if you are married, or Response to Petition about a Registered Domestic Partnership (FL Divorce 212) if you are a domestic partner. 4. You can get the Response and other forms at: The WA State Courts' website: www.courts.wa.gov/forms The Administrative Office of the Courts - call: (360) 705-5328 Washington LawHelp: www.washingtonlawhelp.org, or The Superior Court Clerk's office or county law library (for a fee). 5. If this action has not been filed with the court, you may demand that the petitioner file this action with the court. If you do so, the demand, must be in writing and must be served upon the person signing this summons. Within 14 days after you serve the demand, the petitioner must file this action with court, or the service on you of this summons and petition will be void. 6. If you wish to seek the advice of an attorney in this matter, you should do so promptly so that your written response, if any, may be served on time. 7. One method of serving a copy of your response on the petitioner is to send it by certified mail with return receipt requested. This summons is issued pursuant to RCW 4.28.180 and Superior Court Civil Rule 4.1 of the state of Washington. Dated: 5/1/19 /s/ Vanessa Jackson File original of your response with the clerk of the court at: Skagit County Clerk's Office, 205 W. Rain doesn't keep bikers from roaring into town

balzola@goanacortes.com

Each year, for one Sunday in September, the amount of leather in Anacortes grows exponentially as bikers roar into town for the annual Oyster Run.

This rainy Sunday, a lot of that leather was wet.

The weather meant somewhat smaller crowds, but plenty of participants still turned out for the 38th annual run.

There were rumors that rain would lead to cancellation of the event, but a post on the Oyster Run Facebook page quickly dispelled that.

"The Oyster Run is NOT canceled!" the post stated. "Rain or shine for the last 38 years the Oyster Run has never canceled! Ride safe! See you there."

"Ain't nobody afraid of rain," said Michael "Dayglo" Boshong, a rider from Sedro-Woolley who was in town with Combat Veterans International.

That bike club has rules, said fellow member Jim "Joker" Stilts of Ferndale.

"Anybody who has a bike better be riding," he said.

He said he was glad plenty of people attended the Oyster Run because he sees people he doesn't see all year, and the event helps him connect with veterans he doesn't yet know.

"We don't melt," shouted one passerby as Stilts talked about the rain on the street corner.

Sam and Jim Wiltse considered staying home in Lake Stevens, but took the risk.

Sam Wiltse said she was worried about the drive because of visibility issues. Normally, they make their way to Anacortes via the backroads, but this year, they took the freeway, where things were a little clearer.

In the end, the ride was totally fine and definitely worth it, she said.

Kimberly and Shawn Moreau from Des Moines attended the Oyster Run for the first time this year.

"I almost backed out, but he was committed," Kimberly Moreau said.

She wanted to experience the event and support her dad, whose motorcycle club had a booth at the event.

"Seeing all the bikes and all the different groups," were the best parts, she said.

The rain did make things slippery, causing a slight mishap for Seattle Cossacks Motorcycle Stunt and Drill Team. Stunt biker George Wright was on top of a 12-person pyramid when he slipped and broke the formation. No one was hurt, but rain was no excuse for the biker's flub.

As "punishment," his teammates laid him on the road with a wooden plank on top as a ramp for a bike (driven by his father) to jump over him.

He threw off the plank and fled the scene, but another member of the club took his place. Stunt driver Jimi Wright then completed the jump to the cheers of the crowd. Again, no one apparently was hurt.

Later, Wright said it can be tricky to keep footing and prop up other people on wet fenders, but the Cossacks don't cancel a show, no matter the weather.

"We perform in all weather — in blazing heat, in the rain, in snow, on rodeo grounds," rider Cole Wright said. "If you book the Cossacks, you'll get a show, no matter what."

To perform in all weather mostly takes experience and practice, several of the members of the stunt team said.

Generally, the team practices once a week during the summer and performs almost every weekend at parades and other shows.

The Cossacks perform two shows each year at the Oyster Run.

Volleyball

The Anacortes High School volleyball team took a couple of losses last week to drop to a record of 0-1 in league and 0-2 overall as of Monday.

The girls played against Mount Baker on Tuesday, but results were not available at press time.

They play Lynden Christian at 7 p.m. Thursday before traveling to Quincy for the Quincy Invitational Volleyball Tournament, starting at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Coupeville 3, Anacortes 1

The Coupeville volleyball team proved to be a tough foe Tuesday, Sept. 17, for the Anacortes Seahawks.

Alyssa Kiser had 21 kills and Kenna Flynn had 36 assists for the Seahawks, but they couldn't get past the Wolves in a 3-1 Coupeville victory.

Coupeville won 25-18, 22-25, 25-18, 25-17.

"Coupeville served tough, and we had a hard time with our pass. We had a hard time getting into our offense," Seahawks coach Kelsey Swapp said.

Aynslee King added eight kills for the Seahawks.

Sehome 3, Anacortes 1
Flynn had 30 assists and Ariana Bickley had 21 digs for Anacortes, but Sehome won 21-25, 25-20, 25-10, 25-21 Thursday, Sept. 19.

"It was a good battle. It was back and forth the whole match," Swapp said.

Kiser had eight kills, and King and Lauren Long each had five kills.

Girls swimming

The Anacortes High

School girls swimming team won its first meet of the season Sept. 17, topping Lynden 122-54 for a Northwest Conference win.

Lauren McClintock claimed a pair of victories for Anacortes, winning the 100-yard butterfly and 100 backstroke. In the butterfly, she won in 1 minute, 8 seconds and won in 1:04.05 in the backstroke.

In the 200 freestyle, Annaly Ellis won for the Seahawks (2:19.07), while Haley Claridge won the 200 individual medley in 2:24.05. Lindsey Brown finished first in the 100 breaststroke in 1:13.59.

The Seahawks won both relays, taking the 200 medley in 2:10.91 and the 400 freestyle in 4:13.44.

The team competed against Burlington-Edison Tuesday, but results were not available at press time.

The team's next meet is at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 3, at Sedro-Woolley.

Girls soccer

Picking up a tie and a loss, the AHS girls found themselves at a record of 0-1-1 in league and 2-2-1 overall as of Monday morning.

The girls played Monday afternoon, but results were not available at press time.

They play at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at Lynden Christian and then host Meridian at 7 p.m. Monday.

Anacortes 1, Blaine 1

Erin Kennedy and Ellison Kephart connected Tuesday, Sept. 17, to boost the Anacortes girls' soccer team to a tie with a tough opponent.

Kephart headed in a Kennedy free kick as the Seahawks earned a 1-1 draw with Blaine.

Kennedy was about 35 yards out when she took her free kick.

"It was a great far-post ball ... beautiful," Seahawks coach Gretchen Hanson said. "I'm proud of the way they've

Anacortes theater brings classic musical story to life

BY BRIANA ALZOLA
balzola@goanacortes.com

When one man sets out to prove that a manner of speaking can transform anyone from a poor flower seller on the street to a fine lady who can mingle with the upper crust, he finds a little more than he bargains for.

Henry Higgins studies dialects and is intrigued when he meets Eliza Doolittle, who has spent much of her life without education, in "My Fair Lady," which opens Friday at Anacortes Community Theatre.

Henry (Mark Wenzel) works with Eliza (Charlie McCarthy) to rid her of a cockney accent and less-than-refined ways with some help from his new friend and fellow dialect expert Colonel Pickering (Ron Wohl). Below: Alfred Doolittle (center, Malcolm Taylor) gets some help with friends to celebrate one last night before getting married.

As he takes Eliza from her life of poverty, dresses her in nice clothes and teaches her to speak, he starts to spend more and more time with her and he soon learns there is more to her than he thought, especially after she starts being wooed by the handsome Freddy Eynsford-Hill (Tom Ochiai).

Things are even more complicated when Eliza's down-and-out father Alfred P. Doolittle (Malcolm Taylor) shows up, looking for a handout.

The story is one that has been told on stage and in film, and audiences have fallen in love with the story.

"It's a classic for a reason," Wenzel said.

Playing a character that has also been portrayed by both Julie Andrews and Audrey Hepburn is a challenge, McCarthy said.

"Everyone has a distinct picture of who they think Eliza should be,"

BRIANA ALZOLA / ANACORTES AMERICAN

She has tried to keep some of the elements of the classic performances in her portrayal, but also added her own spin.

McCarthy also has the challenge of accents. Eliza starts with a cockney accent, but changes accents later. It's easy to slip back into the rougher accent, McCarthy said.

It's a fun role to play. "She's a super-relatable character," McCarthy said.

Wenzel also found his role challenging. He has been in 30 theatrical productions and said this one is by far the most difficult. He had to learn the accent and an immense line load, and deal with the songs in a new way. The Henry Higgins role was played originally by Rex Harrison and is meant to be performed by a non-singer. Wenzel, as a singer, had a hard time working with the songs.

Wohl and Taylor, too, felt like they had a lot to live up to after being cast.

It's worth it, though, because the show is so relevant to life and the human experience, Wenzel said.

"Everybody can relate to it," he said.

Taylor said he went back and watched the film again, remembering just how great the performances were.

Choreographer Roz Huntley had actually never seen the movie before agreeing to take on that challenge, so that was her first step.

Then, she watched YouTube videos and saw what other people did, partly for inspiration and partly to make sure she wouldn't miss out on a big moment.

If every theater troupe she watched did one thing, she knew audiences would be disappointed if they didn't see it in Anacortes.

Then, she put her own twists on things. Her Works and choreographed for "Fame Jr." at Anacortes Middle School last year. Before that, though, she had only choreographed for her classes, so being a part of musicals has been a learning experience.

"I listened to the music a lot and tried to visualize things," Huntley said.

She remembers taking the stage at ACT when she was 11, alongside Malcolm Taylor and Mike Jenkins, who she is choreographing in this show.

This is an especially sweet moment for Taylor, who is moving from Anacortes. This show, which is around 30 for him, will be his last here.

It's also the last show that the Wenzels will do in the Skagit Valley before they move to Singapore next year, where Mark Wenzel took a job as superintendent of an international school.

This show has veteran actors like Taylor, Jenkins and Mark Wenzel, but also people who have never been on stage here or elsewhere.

That variety is representative of the world at large, Julie Wenzel said. "That's one of the beautiful things about community theater."

The cross country team at Anacortes Middle School recently took along garbage bags while out running to help clean up the streets.

AMS cross country runners pick up trash along route

BY BRIANA ALZOLA
balzola@goanacortes.com

As the cross country team (made up of more than 50 students) set off from Anacortes Middle School Thursday, Sept. 19, it looked a little different than normal.

In addition to their running clothes and sneakers, the young athletes sported blue gloves and carried garbage bags that fluttered in the wind behind them.

Small teams of runners headed off in different directions with one goal — to clean up the streets while they ran their roughly two to three miles.

The group participated in a team-wide cleanup effort, inspired by young runner Jonah Jeter.

The eighth-grader just joined the AMS cross country team this year after moving back to Anacortes. He said when he would go on walks with his dad, his dad would always bring a bag to pick up trash along his route.

When Jonah started running with the team, he noticed trash along the trail and started picking it up. When he couldn't carry any more in his hands, he pulled out the bottom of his shirt to carry more.

The next day, he showed up with a bag. Each day, he heads out with his bag and picks up the trash he sees.

"The amount of trash that is ending up in our oceans is tremendous," he said. "We need to do our part and be responsible about pollution."

Plastic bags are especially bad for sealife, he said.

His teammates started to feel inspired by Jonah and his drive to help clean up Anacortes, coach Tammy Templeton said. So the coaches organized the team cleanup day.

Cleaning up the community

CONTRIBUTED / ROXY SELIGMAN

“Many hands make light work” was the theme of last Saturday’s community Day of Service organized by the local Elders Quorum of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Volunteers of all ages worked together to clean up debris and spread mulch at the city’s Grandview Cemetery.

Tickets on sale for annual Friends of the Forest benefit

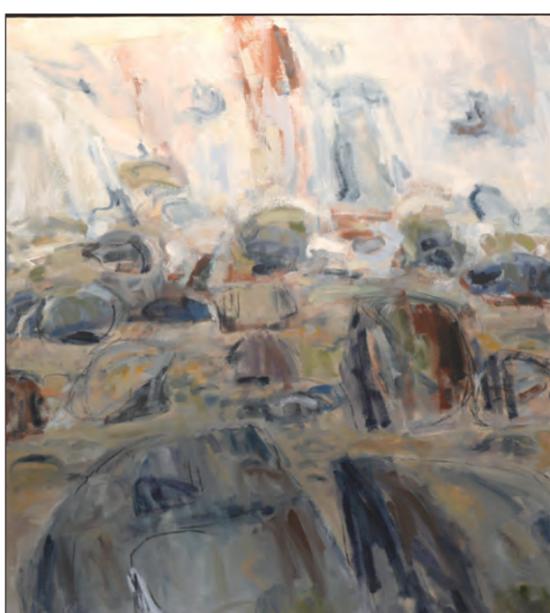

The 32nd annual Friends of the Anacortes Community Forest Lands benefit event will be 5-11 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 2, at the Port of Anacortes Transit Shed.

Tickets are on sale now for the event, which will feature live music by Fidalgo Swing, dinner and auctions.

Proceeds will support the Friends of the Forest Education and Stewardship Program, which provides educational activities in the forest lands. The group provides third-grade forest education programs and free, guided community hikes.

Tickets are $70 a person or $525 for a table of eight and are available at www.friendsoftheacfl.org, at the Friends of the Anacortes Community Forest Lands office or at Watermark Book Co.

Information: 360-293-3725

CONTRIBUTED

‘Ice Front’ by Dederick Ward is one of the featured pieces for the annual Friends of the Anacortes Community Forest Lands benefit dinner and auction, coming up in November. Tickets are on sale now.

Community members can receive flu shots at AMS

The Anacortes School District is partnering with the Seattle Visiting Nurse Association to provide a flu shot clinic from 3-7 p.m. today in the Anacortes Middle School commons, 2202 M Ave.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends a flu vaccine for everyone over six months old.

The clinic will be open to all Anacortes School District children (ages 4 and older), their families and community members.

All participants will be asked to provide their health insurance information to receive an immunization. SVNA will electronically bill insurance. They bill almost all insurance plans, but are not able to accept Cigna or Provider One.

Students 18 years and younger without current health insurance coverage will be offered a flu shot at no cost.

Adults without current insurance coverage may pay the $40 immunization fee with cash or check.

A SPECIAL THANK YOU TO NEWSPAPER CARRIERS!

This is Christie!

And here are some cool facts about her:

Christie has been delivering the Skagit Valley Herald since August 27th, 2001, and she's had the same route for 16 of those 18 years!

Christie likes to draw and color, she's made blankets for all of her children, and she enjoys scrapbooking. She also likes to sing but only along to the radio and in the shower! Christie is passionate about helping others; she gives out donated clothes, food, water and dog treats to the homeless as she delivers her route. She's been doing it for so long that people know to come up to her when they are in need.

Christie's favorite music to listen to as she delivers is worship music, but she likes country music too. Christie's favorite food is Chinese food...especially almond chicken!

The benefits of being a carrier as told by Christie:

"For the first ten years while my kids were in school, the hours were great because I could still be home to take care of them. As they got older, all of my kids have helped me with routes. They loved going with me and delivering to houses after school, and eventually got routes of their own. Being a carrier has given me a unique way to bond with my children."

Thank you for all that you do, Christie!

Why News In Education?

With the help of generous contributions from the public, the Skagit Publishing News In Education Program provides print and digital copies of the Skagit Valley Herald to students in Skagit County at no cost to the schools. NIE provides students with a current source of information, and helps teachers bring relevant world application to the subjects they teach. Access to print and digital newspapers helps to inspire enthusiastic readers, improve vocabulary, and create awareness. It encourages efficient problem solving, critical thinking and developed STEM skills.

"The Newspapers in Education (NIE) program is a tremendous resource for Skagit high schools. With this access and exposure to quality print journalism, our students are able to make connections between their own learning in the classroom and local and global issues, while also enjoying articles that highlight student academic and athletic accomplishments. Our partnership with NIE reaffirms our community's commitment to supporting students and education as a whole."

0530 FIREWOOD

Alder, Maple & Birch.
Cut any size.
Delivered 7 days/wk.
360-630-3334

WA State law requires wood sellers to provide a receipt that includes the following:

- * Picture of firewood stacked
- * Seller's name and address
- * Buyers name and address
- * Date of purchase
- * Price
- * Quantity delivered

When you buy firewood write the seller's phone number and the license plate number of the delivery vehicle; quantity upon which the price is based; and type and quality of the wood.

The legal measure for firewood in Washington is the cord or a fraction of a cord. A cord is 128 cubic feet (4ft X 8ft X 4ft = 128 cubic feet). Sellers may not legitimately use terms such as "truckload," "face cord," "rack" or "pile." These terms have no legal definition and cannot, therefore, be used as a measure for the amount of firewood being sold.
