

Unearthing The Stories That Keep Us All Connected

We are the ink-stained, pen-scratched, broadsheet-ed, 131-year-old weekly newspaper for Stanwood and Camano Island. We circulate to people who turn our pages for politics, news, features, high-school sports and slices of humanity. We are community journalism with the boundaries pushed. The prose refined. We are hungry to be different, to be professional, to be better than we were last week. Our pages might go from shop box to recycle bin to fire starter, but the stories remain. They drive our presses. They are all that matter.
