

70 years: Former Warden couple celebrates platinum anniversary

By CHERYL SCHWEIZER
Staff Writer

WARDEN — Kay L. and Norma Lybbert said one of the keys to a successful marriage is commitment. The Lybberts have some experience in that - they were married in 1952 and will celebrate their 70th anniversary this month.

Norma Lybbert said it hasn't always been easy, but they always found a way.

"We always worked it out," she said.

"We've had a good marriage," Kay Lybbert said.

Over the years they have made some mistakes, he said, but they've always managed to get through them as a couple and as a family. The Lybberts have seven children.

Not everyone was sure it would work out, back in 1952. Kay Lybbert was 16, Norma was 15 and a sophomore at Moses Lake High School.

"I'd already quit school," Kay said.

WASHINGTON — Americans who have long enjoyed the benefits of historically low interest rates will have to adapt to a very different environment as the Federal Reserve embarks on what's likely to be a prolonged period of rate hikes to fight inflation.

Record-low mortgage rates below 3%, reached last year, are already gone. Credit card interest rates and the costs of an auto loan will also likely move up. Savers may receive somewhat better returns, depending on their bank, while returns on long-term bond funds will likely suffer.

The Fed's initial quarter-point rate hike Wednesday in its benchmark short-term

Talking to kids about nukes: Parents, experts suggest truth

By LEANNE ITALIE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jillian Amodio went with the truth when her 10-year-old daughter had some pointed questions about the war in Ukraine.

"When she asked what nuclear weapons were, I explained in simple terms that they're explosive devices used in warfare that are capable of releasing tremendous amounts of energy and causing widespread harm and damage," said the Annapolis, Maryland, founder of a support group called Moms for Mental Health.

But her daughter wasn't finished there.

"She asked if we were in danger of being hit with nuclear weapons," said

Amodio. "And I explained that leaders around the world are responsible for ensuring that nuclear warfare doesn't occur, and that we have learned from past instances just how devastating the effects of nuclear warfare can be."

She did what many parents and experts recommend: She led with the truth, though she chose her details based on what she knew her child could handle emotionally.

The day Russian President Vladimir Putin ordered his nuclear forces placed on high alert late last month was a big one for some parents with inquisitive kids.

On social media, in classrooms and at the playground, children who hear about Russia's invasion of Ukraine are wondering where the war could lead. It's a moment that can feel similar to growing up during the Cold War, when there was talk of nuclear winter, radiation and the atomic bomb.

Unlike in the past, however, today's kids have greater unchecked access to both accurate images, video and information but loads of disinformation, too. What some also have are loved ones with personal experiences of tense nuclear times.

"With younger kids, speak simply and avoid discussing scary topics in detail. With adolescents, honesty is the best policy. Always be transparent," said Dr. Beth Oller, a family physician in Stockton, Kansas, and mom

He quit to go to work on the family farm in Mae Valley, he said, but he already had plenty of farming experience. Sugar beets were a major crop in the early 1950s, and Kay Lybbert was running a beet harvester at 14 years of age.

"I grew up young," he said.

But his dad thought he wasn't ready for a serious relationship, at least not as serious as things were getting.

"He told me I couldn't see her anymore, and I had to do something," he said.

So he came up with a solution that was a little radical. He told his parents a fib, the kind of fib that in 1952 pretty much mandated marriage.

They were married March 22, 1952 in the Lybbert family living room.

Family and friends were skeptical, Norma said, and some disapproved of her choice.

"But they got over it," she said.

Kay said they started out on their own farm in Block 40 near Moses Lake before moving to Warden, where they lived for about 40 years. They moved to the Spokane area in 2012 to be closer to their surviving children.

Mostly they grew potatoes and wheat, Kay said, but basically, he raised whatever was profitable.

"About anything you could farm," he said.

It wasn't always easy. In 1952, girls who were married couldn't stay in school; Norma had to drop out of school and that required some adjustment. Bad weather in 1955 meant they lost the year's crop and all the equity they had built up in their land. Kay ended up going to work for a few years before he could start his own farm again.

But the worst was in 1957 when their house caught fire. Their young son died in the blaze. Another son died in 2010 and a daughter in 2021.

That's not how life should work, Kay said.

"It's hard," Norma said. But the tragedies didn't break them up.

"They seemed to pull us together rather than pull us apart," Norma said.

They worked hard for the life they built, Kay said.

"Needless to say, we did it together," he said.

In fact, that's true of everything they did, work or play.

Norma and Kay L. Lybbert on their wedding day, March 22, 1952. During their marriage, they had seven children and have built a life on the love they share for each other and their family.

"We love to do things together," he said.

His wife always supported him in decisions - he could have said they'd be moving to Alaska and Norma would have gone along, he said.

They shared a commitment to each other, he said, and Norma agreed. "We argue but we end up loving each other," she said.
